Dear Mr. Dulles:

Since I know that your time is valuable, I will make this letter brief.

I have read that jet planes cannot be started after they have flamed-out unless they come down to a lower altitude. Namely regarding the case of the U-2.

I think that I have an idea which would solve that problem; plus maybe give the U-2 a higher altitude range for a short period of time in case of emergencies. The weight of this item should be negligible.

This idea may have been tried before I don't know. Since there is a lot at stake on our jets, I thought that it would be worth writing a letter to you. If you are interested please write to

Mr. Joseph Sedik
